JURY SELECTED AND TRIAL IS ON

Case of State vs. William H. Osborne Promises to Continue Rest of Week.

OVERRULES MOTION TO QUASH

Is Charged With Killing Christman While Acting as Constable in Justice's Court.

THE JURY.

Not much difficulty was experienced in obtaining a jury in the case of the State vs. William H. Osborne, charged with the murder of Rupert Christman, which started this morning in the circuit court. Only a few men were excused and the jury which will decide Osborne's fate is composed for the most part of farmers or retired farmers, there being a few exceptions.

The jury was called after Judge Blair overruled a motion to quash the indictment. The defense based the motion to quash because the affidavit mentioned that the case was venued to this county from Fayette. Judge Blair in overruling the motion said he could see no reason for not trying Osborne on the affidavit as it stood. The jury was impaneled and the first witness was called shortly after 10 o'clock.

Although the trial pregressed rapidly today, many witnesses being examined, it is expected the case would not go to the jury before Saturday afternoon. It is understood that the State has about thirty witnesses and the defense twenty-two.

The defendant is surrounded by a great array of legal talent. He is represented by Connor, Christman & Conner, Wiles & Springer of Connersville and Sparks & Gary of this city. The State is represented by Prosecutor O'Neil of this county, Prosecutor Frank Edwards of Connersville and Prosecutor Jessop of Richmond. Mr. Jessop did most of the work today for the State in direct questioning and will play an important part in the trial.

Policeman Jordan of the Connersville force was the first witness. His testimony was for the purpose of showing where Osborne obtained the revolver with which he is alleged to have killed Christman. Mr. Jordan testified that on Sunday morning, April 30, he was at the Connersville city hall and had loaned Osborne a revolver. Osborne at that time was a constable in the squire's court.

Probably the most damaging evidence against Osborne given today was the testimony of Perry Christman, the thirteen-year-old brother of the man who was killed. Young Christman said Osborne came to his home, and asked for Rupert. When told he was not there Osborne, according to the boy, said Rupert had better not run or he would get shot. The lad stuck to his story and insisted Osborne said he would shoot if Rupert attempted to run.

David Christman, father of the dead man, testified he was not present when the shooting took place. He gave a vivid description of the Christman farm with reference to the location of the scene of the crime. On cross examination Mr. Christman admitted he had been sentenced to jail fifteen years ago for stealing turkeys.

Madie Christman, age 14 years, the daughter of David Christman and a sister of Rupert, testified that she was home at the time Osborne and the party called for her brother. She heard him talk to her younger sister but knew no direct evidence.

Ansen Miller, sheriff of Fayette county, was examined at length. He was with the party from Connersville which went to arrest Christman. The party besides himself included Chief Lewis, Osborne and the driver of the automobile.

DEFACE WALLS; ARRESTS TO COME

Connersville Boys Alleged to Have Written Vulgar Expressions in I. & C. Toilet Room.

COMPANY TAKES PICTURES

The defacing of the walls of the new toilet room at the I. & C. station by drawing and writing vulgar expressions may lead to the arrest of a gang of Connorsville boys. Several pictures have been taken of the room and they are in the hands of Chief McAllister. The names of the boys are shown in the pictures and Chief McAllister will send them to the Connorsville Chief of Police. He expected Chief Lewis here today for the Osborne trial, but he did not come. The writing and drawing on the walls is of such a character that the traction officials believe they are justified in pushing the prosecution.

Work of the school board is an excellent indication of condition in the city. Responsibility for providing needy children with clothing necessary for school attendance is placed upon the board and its members can form an opinion of conditions from the number of calls placed with them.

Although the schools have been opened for more than two months, there have been only a few cases in which the school board has found it necessary to issue orders for clothing.

In assisting the poor the city is free from responsibility and the money paid on orders of the school board comes out of the county funds.

As the law compels children under fourteen years of age to attend school, they must be provided with proper clothing if the poor to secure it.

School trustees then investigate and many bills incurred are filed with the county.

Township Trustee J. Vincent Young has also found it necessary to pay out less money than usual. He assigns as the reason the lack of real cold weather. When the first cool weather struck this city, he had a brief rush, but the total of money paid reached only a small figure. Since then there have been few calls. A drop in the mercury, he says is required to send needy people to his office as they need more fuel, clothing and food.

According to Mr. Young, late arrival of cold weather will end the total paid out for the winter materially. As long as nice weather remains, many people will need less help and at the same time will be able to prepare themselves better for the cold weather coming.

The various charitable organization of the city continue their work of relieving distress. Many cases are for this reason never reported to the city or township authorities but their records are, nevertheless a good indication of conditions in general.

In order to get the two new depots a fight will have to be made and a large crowd is urged to be present. Local business men have secured some facts such as data and other valuable information which will be presented to the commission. The waiting rooms of the two stations have been measured and the date when they were built have also been learned. It will take a lot of convincing talk to get the new stations as the railroad companies intend to make quite a fight against the improvement.

HAVE FEW CALLS INDIANA AND FOR CHARITY PURDUE TO CLASH

Local Authorities Have Small Number of People Ask For Assistance, Due to Mild Weather.

HAVE VERY FEW APPLICATIONS TO RUN TWO SPECIAL TRAINS

Other Charitable Organizations Continue Work of Relieving Distress But Conditions Are Good.

Applications to the various authorities and charity organizations for assistance have been unusually few in number this fall, according to the observation of those in charge of the distribution. Continued warm weather to a later date than usual is held responsible as the demand for clothing, fuel or food depends almost entirely upon severe weather. With this condition existing up to this time, indications are that the money to be paid out for the county's poor will be less for the entire winter.

Reports received in Indianapolis from over the State indicate that the two special trains to be run from there to Bloomington next Saturday for the Purdue-Indiana game will be crowded with supporters of the two State schools. The time of departure of the trains has been arranged especially for the benefit of alumni of the two universities living in the towns surrounding Indianapolis. The first train will leave for Bloomington at 9:30 and the second at 9:45, which will give outsiders plenty of time to reach the city.

Coming back, the first train will leave at 6 o'clock and, arriving in Indianapolis an hour and a half later, will enable those living outside of the city to take early interurban cars for their homes. One of the trains will be held in Bloomington until 10:30, for the benefit of those who wish to attend the evening festivities at the university, arranged in connection with the "Home Coming." This feature, in connection with the game, is expected to draw an unusual number of old "grads" back to the old college town.

The excursions will be run over the Illinois Central line, which has provided a round trip rate of $1. District Passenger Agent A. J. McDougal will have personal charge of the trains and says the scheduled time will be made both going and coming.

Encouraged by the showing of their team against Rose Poly last Saturday at Lafayette many Purdue alumni here are planning to attend the game. Local alumni will hold a smoker Wednesday night and it is probable the Purdue grads will get together and talk over the game later in the week. From the early seat sale there it is evident that a large number of supporters will go down to Bloomington Saturday to cheer their respective teams.

Until last Saturday, it was thought the crimson would have little trouble in defeating the old gold and black, but the showing of the Boilermakers in their last game has boosted their stock almost to par, and a hard fought battle is predicted. No matter how poor a showing either may have made earlier in the season, it is sure to fight to the last ditch when opposing its old-time rival.

According to Mr. Young, late arrival of cold weather will end the total paid out for the winter materially. As long as nice weather remains, many people will need less help and at the same time will be able to prepare themselves better for the cold weather coming.

THE WEATHER

Although unfavorable conditions prevailed throughout the day, a large crowd was present at the second combination sale held at the Davis sale pavilion in South Morgan street. The promoters were somewhat disappointed in the size of the crowd, which would have been larger if it had not rained. The prices were good and the sale is said to have been a great success. The large amount of stock entered was a surprise even to the managers.

POLICE TO STOP PRACTICE

Horses Hitched at Racks Must Have Blankets.

The police department has had many complaints of late concerning farmers and others who leave their horses hitched in the open without blankets. Chief McAllister is determined to break up the practice and hereafter will place all horses found hitched at the various racks without blankets in the livery stable and warns the owners to pay the charges and say nothing further or affidavits will be filed immediately.

LAYS OUT EVEN THE OLD INHABITANTS

They Can Not Recall Another Year in Their Experience to Equal the Present One.

RECORD FOR FREAKISHNESS

The weather for 1911 has laid out the oldest inhabitant—he has nothing to say. The year has been remarkable in many respects, most fortunately of all in its influence on crops, which, taken all in all so far as this particular section of the country is concerned, have been unprecedented in May and June of this year mid-summer temperature was maintained and in the autumn frost was a month late. The pastures were green until they were covered by the snows. Rushville had during the summer of 1911 the heaviest three hours rainfall this part of the country has ever known.

To keep up its record for freakishness, there came one week ago last Saturday night the most remarkable change in the temperature ever experienced in Indiana within twenty-four hours.

On Saturday overcoats were not needed; doors and windows were open; spring weather prevailed. On Sunday morning a typical February blizzard was blowing, and there was no thaw until Wednesday. On Tuesday of the week before last the northern part of Indiana had a twenty-six inch snowfall, and on Wednesday of last week came for a time the heaviest snow seen in this latitude in early November for many years. Now one of the "old-fashioned winters" the old settler is always longing for, is to be faced, but which perhaps is a more agreeable thing to dream about than to be experienced.

The department has also been extremely fortunate in securing Mr. Otis Crane of Lebanon, Ind., to participate in the Short Course programs. Mr. Crane is a speaker whose reputation to hold his audience, by means of his matchless wit and vast knowledge of his subject, is fast becoming national. As an authority on poultry he will have much of interest to say to the Short Course students for their husbands.

WARNED NOT TO MISREPRESENT

Chief Chemist Gives Orders For Ben Davis Apples Not to be Sold For Another Variety.

VIOLATION OF THE STATE LAW

H. E. Barnard, chief chemist for the State board of health, has issued orders to his force of field inspectors to arrest apple dealers caught selling Ben Davis apples for another variety. The order follows a report to the effect that some dealers are selling such apples by representing them to be Roman Beauties, New York Pippins and other varieties.

Mr. Barnard says that such misrepresentation concerning apples is as much a violation of the State food law as selling coffee or any other food under a false label. He says he has no objection to the Ben Davis apple, but when sold it must be sold as a Ben Davis apple and not offered as some other variety.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT THE DAILY REPUBLICAN

Refuses to Pay Ex-County Treasurer For Services Rendered in Collecting City Taxes.

Pipe Extension to New Factory is Completed at Total Cost of $1728.85.

A quorum was present at the special meeting of the city council last night and the regular business left over from Tuesday night was taken up and disposed of. Councilmen Moore, Parsons and Kelley were present. The session was rather tame as nothing of importance was pending. About the most important thing the council did was the turning down of the claim of Alvan Moor which had been before the council for the last six months.

Mr. Moor's claim was for services rendered the city while he was county treasurer. He asked something like seven hundred dollars for collecting the city's taxes. The report of the finance committee as read to the council is as follows: "We, the finance committee report that we have carefully considered the claim of Alvan Moor and advise that said claim be not allowed, for the reason that the law on the subject does not warrant the city in paying the county treasurer for collecting the city's taxes."

C. H. Parsons, E. M. Kelley, A. E. Newhouse, Committee.

The city clerk was instructed to order the I. & C. traction company to install a suitable crossing at Perkins street. At present the crossing is very bad and the city desires a crossing on the order of the one at Main street.

The report of A. T. Mahin, superintendent of the water and light plant was received and ordered placed on file. The report stated that the pipe extension to the Rushville Furniture Company's factory for fire protection had been completed and was ready for use. The statement gave in detail the construction of the line. The total cost including labor and material was $1728.85.

The finance committee reported that the treasurer's report for the month of October had been audited and found to be correct. The report was accepted and ordered placed on record. Before adjourning, claims to the amount of $1800 were allowed.

CORDIA MARTIN INDICTED

Once Convicted of Bank Robbery Will be Retried.

The Hancock county grand jury has returned an indictment charging Cordia Martin with burglary in connection with the robbery of the bank at New Palestine a year ago. Martin was convicted of this crime in the Marion county courts and was serving his sentence in the prison at Michigan City, when the supreme court gave a decision declaring it an error to have tried him in Marion county, when the crime was committed in Hancock. He was released from the prison and has since been in the Marion county jail awaiting trial. Martin once escaped from the jail at Greenfield and was sent to Indianapolis for safe keeping.

ASK OIL KING TO COME FORWARD

Stanley Committee Would Like to Hear His Side of It.

QUESTION IS, WILL HE DO IT?

The Committee Would Also Like to Know What John D. Almoner, the Rev. Frederick T. Gates, Has to Say For Himself in Connection With That Mesabe Deal in Which the Merritts Were So Beautifully Trimmed.

Washington, Nov. 23.—A cordial invitation is extended by the Stanley committee to John D. Rockefeller to appear before it and tell how he acquired the Mesabe range ore property in Minnesota which he later turned over to the United States steel corporation. If he does not care to appear the committee will not try to force him, but hopes the public will think that Mr. Rockefeller has no answer to the charges of Alfred and Leonidas Merritt of Duluth, that Mr. Rockefeller "high financed" them out of more than $10,000,000 in less than two months. If it rested with O. C. Stanley, chairman of the steel committee, a subpoena server would be on the oil man's trail today. Mr. Stanley announced, without the authority of the commission behind him, that Mr. Rockefeller and the Rev. F. T. Gates, his charities manager, who, according to testimony, helped materially to "high finance" the Merritt brothers, would be formally summoned and examined at length. But later the committee went into executive session and decided to do no such thing. So Mr. Rockefeller and the Rev. Dr. Gates will be asked if they want to appear. If they do not that will end the matter.

Tears Rolled Down His Cheeks.

Leonidas Merritt, brother of Witness Alfred, who previously had so graphically discoursed to the committee by whom he had been "trimmed" by John D. was before Mr. Stanley and his associates practically all day. He made an extremely picturesque witness. He used homely language and rural expletives, and at times during his testimony, especially when describing how he was separated from his fortune by Mr. Rockefeller and the Rev. Gates, the tears rolled down his cheeks and he choked so that he could not proceed.

"Just think of it," he cried at the climax of his testimony, as he waved his big fist in the air, "when I went to try to see Rockefeller, my brother, my friends and myself had $20,000,000 worth of property. I got about $420,000 from Rockefeller in loans and put up $10,000,000 worth of securities as collateral."

"And what did you have when your four months of business dealing with Mr. Rockefeller were at an end?" inquired Representative Beall of Texas.

"I had a chance to walk from New York to Duluth on the ties—that's all," he replied, slapping his hand on the table.

The Hypnotic Mr. Rockefeller.

Although Witness Leonidas described himself, as did his brother Alfred the day before, as a "lumber jack who knew more about woodcraft than high finance," he declared in the same breath that it was not until he came under the mesmeric influence of John D. Rockefeller himself that he entered into the consolidation of the Mesabe ore and railroad properties, long desired by Mr. Rockefeller, and which finally resulted in transforming the Merritts from millionaires to paupers.

He described his single brief interview with Mr. Rockefeller when he succeeded to the "influence."

It seems that when Leonidas went to New York in the panicky days of '93 to talk over the consolidation plans proposed by Mr. Rockefeller, he was met by the Rev. Dr. Gates.

The latter became his constant companion and harped all the time, the witness said, on the honesty and piety of the oil king.

But despite the persuasions of Mr. Gates, he refused, he testified, to the Rockefeller proposition, although he and those interested with him in his properties were mighty hard up and needed money the worst way.

Finally Mr. Gates told Merritt that Rockefeller wanted to see him.

"I felt honored," said Leonidas, "at being called before such a magnate.

Kellogg shook hands with me in a nice, gentlemanly way.

He seemed such a kindly, brotherly sort of a fellow.

He talked about the weather and asked after my family.

He told me that my brother and I were all right, for he had looked us up and that we had done a great work in Minnesota and deserved a great reward.

He said if he would agree to the consolidation he proposed to take care of us.

He said he was proud to be our partner and banker.

He said he never speculated and so wouldn't take stock in the proposed consolidation—he would just keep the bonds."

Mr. Merritt leaned back in his chair, locked his hands behind his head and gazed at the ceiling.

"Rockefeller captured me," he said.

"I told him I would agree to his plan, and then he turned me over to the Rev. Dr. Gates once more."

Mr. Merritt told the committee that he and his brother might have saved their millions if they had listened to

Town Development

The effort which are being made in Fort Wayne looking forward to the general improvement and beautification of the city are attracting attention in other cities of Indiana, particularly among those which approximate Fort Wayne in size. A similar movement is now on foot in South Bend, Terre Haute and Evansville, each city having engaged the services of George E. Kessler of St. Louis, the noted landscape architect and civic improvement expert, who is already in the employ of Fort Wayne and with whom Huntington is also negotiating for advice.

A couple of years ago the women's clubs of Grand Rapids, Mich., commenced an agitation for additional parks and playgrounds. Their efforts were seconded by the enterprising and public spirited men of Grand Rapids, and the discussion led to a proposition to issue $200,000 worth of bonds for the acquisition of additional grounds. The proposal to issue the bonds was submitted to the votes of the men, and carried by a large majority, the best women of the city spending all of election day at the polls, urging favorable action upon the voters in the interests of the mechanics and laboring men, their wives and children, who must get their summer outing at home, or get it not at all. The city's largest park is known as the John Ball park, being a gift to the city from a former prominent citizen of that name. The park is now worth fully a quarter of a million dollars. The present park project of Grand Rapids total more than three hundred acres.

Several cities in Switzerland have adopted active measures to prevent juvenile delinquency by the formation of guardian classes to look after children whose parents cannot properly watch over the little boys and girls out of school hours. One of the most efficient of these, Basel, is particularly energetic in this work, with the result that the children of that city have a reputation for good conduct and that the proportion of juvenile arrests is very small for a

DENIES CHARGE

Edward Stibbins Says He Did Not Kill His Father.

Vincennes, Ind., Nov. 23.—The Indiana university and state normal graduate, Edward Stibbins, who is under arrest here on the charge of having murdered his father, George Stibbins, a wealthy farmer of Harrison township, now says he is ready to consult an attorney.

"I am not guilty of the charge of murder," Stibbins said. "Though things look decidedly against me from the newspaper accounts, almost every statement is exaggerated, and when I tell what I know things will take a different turn. I am not worrying about myself in the least, but I am much more interested in my mother's condition. I can't make any statements concerning the murder until after I have consulted an attorney, but I will lay everything before him."

Must Answer Contempt Charge.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 23.—Judge Fortune has ordered Mayor Louis Gerhardt to appear in open court Nov. 27 and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court. The court action was taken when members of the city council filed a petition which set forth that Mayor Gerhardt had violated a temporary restraining order of the court by removing Donn M. Roberts from office as city engineer.

Bernard Laughlin was guest of Ralph and John Nipp Sunday.

Will Whittion,

Mr. and Mrs. Will Whittion entertained at dinner Sunday, Fred Bell and family, Miller Whitton and family, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Borders, Eli Sharp and family and Aunt Nancy Whitton.

"And by golly," cried Mr. Merritt, "I really believed it then. Now I know, of course, that Gates just lied."

Attorney Reed for the United States Steel corporation, who had been interrupting the witness at intervals, asked Chairman Stanley at this point if he considered this line of testimony competent to the inquiry.

"I feel," returned Mr. Stanley, with dramatic emphasis, "that right at this minute I am performing the greatest public service I ever did in my life."

It is rumored that an Indianapolis newspaper man is negotiating the purchase of the Richmond Morning News with a view of changing it to a regular simon-pure Republican paper. Something of that kind is badly needed in Richmond and Wayne county. That city and county is still staunchly Republican notwithstanding the continued and persistent efforts of both the other papers to lead them into the by-paths.

general disposition for harmony among Republicans and an old fashioned love feast with its enthusing features would help.

Some years ago the political demagogues and their newspaper organs inaugurated a campaign of class hatred by inciting labor against capital. The effect was that Cleveland, a Democratic president was elected, and the result was most disastrous, as everyone will remember. The worst sufferers were the laboring people. Ordinarily the people can only be fooled once, and for this reason another campaign of arraying labor against capital would not succeed. But the political demagogue is wise—it is "Big Business" or the "Interests" now, and they are working hard at it. The result will be that the deluded victims of the demagogues will be the heavy losers in the game.

Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, a man with rare powers of observation and analysis, who traveled in Europe extensively the past summer, says in his Scientific American interview, speaking of "Big Business" in Germany: "The danger for us lies largely in the raw methods of interference by the Government and the weighing down of business with cumbersome and little understood laws, some of which are enforced and others are not. Furthermore, while political interests in Germany are universally friendly to the trade and commerce, in this country politics is one of the heaviest burdens that industry and commerce have to carry."

There you are. The weighing down and the burdening of industry and commerce is the work of the political demagogue, who seeks to curry favor with the masses. Instead of listening to him, he should be squealed.

Under Democratic rule the State treasury has become practically bankrupt. Governor Marshall, who, more than any other man is responsible for this condition of things, has neither a preventive or remedy to propose or adopt. He is like a greenhorn on a bicycle headed for a telephone pole, he fixes his hypnotic eye on an inevitable and disastrous objective and trembling awaits the crash. Great timber for President that! Yet he actually thinks he is presidential timber.

SHAFT IN HONOR OF STANTON

Monument Recently Erected at Steubenville, Ohio, to Lincoln's Secretary of War.

Steubenville, O.—Old Home week in Steubenville was most fittingly selected as the appropriate time to dedicate a monument to the town's most distinguished son, Edwin McMasters Stanton, the war secretary of President Lincoln. At the dedication great officials of the nation were present to honor the memory of one of the historic characters of his time.

Edwin McMasters Stanton was born in 1814 and his early life, owing to the death of his father, who was a physician, was a struggle against poverty. By hard work he managed to study law and his rise in his profession was rapid. In December, 1860, he was appointed attorney general by President Buchanan and in 1862 President Lincoln appointed him secretary of war. He retired from this arduous post in May, 1868, broken in health, in his lucrative practice, which he had sacrificed to his country, all gone, bankrupt in purse, once more to face the world. Although only in his fifty-fourth year, he had lived a generation in the preceding six years, and the process was slow and halting. He made telling speeches for General Grant in the presidential campaign of 1868, the first of which was at Steubenville. On December 20, 1869, he was appointed associate justice of the supreme court, but never took his seat. He died December 24 and his body rests in Oak Hill cemetery, Washington.

WHEN $1 HATS WERE ENVIED

A New York-to-Kansas Millinery Shipment of 22 Years Ago Turns Up.

Kansas City, Mo.—When "wife" wanted a new hat twenty years ago, "husband" would give her $1.25 and say, "Now, dear, get the best hat in town and don't bother about returning the change to me." That's the "story" in twenty hats that Mrs. Belle Jones of Burden, Kan., brought with her to Kansas City, the other day.

Mrs. Jones started a millinery store in Burden about twenty-five years ago. Just twenty-two years ago she moved her stock from one part of town to another. A box of twenty hats was misplaced and Mrs. Jones believed it had been lost. They were little hats in those days and the whole lot was packed in a box that would hardly hold one of the picture hats of today. Recently Mrs. Jones found the box and brought it to Kansas City.

There were three leading styles in the box: The dress hat, with its stiff little aigrette standing lonely on the crown; the sailor, a miniature "Merry Widow," about the size of an up-to-date doll's hat, and the bonnet, which perched on the head in a precarious balance. The best hat in the lot retailed at $1.25. All were New York styles, and they were envied generally when they first were placed on exhibition in the little shop window of Mrs. Jones.

Pins Blondine Her Hair.
Akron, O.—Mrs. Edward Vonkeenah has sent a lock of her hair to Dr. Harvey Wiley, the government's chief chemist. She says she recently purchased some celluloid hairpins which have turned her hair from brown to yellow and she proposes to sue the maker of the pins if an analysis will justify the suit.

Miss Marguerite Neutzenhizer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Neutzenhizer, and Roy E. Harrold, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harrold, were married last evening by the Rev. J. B. Meacham at seven-thirty o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in North Morgan street. The simple ring ceremony was used and was witnessed by a company of about forty, including only the relatives and most intimate friends.

During the ceremony Miss Jean Bishop played "Cavalleria Rusticana." The decorations were green and white and the marriage ceremony was performed under a large white bell, draped with smilax. Following the wedding a three course dinner was served. The bride is a well known and popular young woman. She is a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority of Indiana University, where she attended school after graduating from the local high school in 1907. She is also a member of the local Tri Kappa sorority. Mr. Harrold is a graduate of Wabash College in the class of 1908 and is at present news editor of the Daily Republican, which position he has held for several years.

The guests from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hepp of Shelbyville and son Kenneth of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Cooley and Miss Inez Lockhart of Connersville; Albert Brisford and Mr. and Mrs. Will Doyle of Indianapolis. After a short wedding trip to Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Harrold will be at home at 214 West Fourth street.

NEW CASTLE NAMED AS MEETING PLACE

City of Roses Will Entertain Lincoln League of Indiana Monday, February 12.

1000 REPUBLICANS EXPECTED

The Lincoln League of Indiana will meet Monday, February 12, Abraham Lincoln's birthday, at New Castle. At a meeting of the executive committee of the league, yesterday at the Claypool hotel in Indianapolis, Judge Ed Jackson of New Castle was named as secretary of the organization in place of Olin W. Kennedy, who now is at Denver, Col., and the committee selected Judge Jackson's home city as the place for the 1912 convention.

One of the big features of the entertainment program at New Castle will be a banquet for 500 or more guests. It is expected that the convention will draw 1,000 or more Republicans to the City of Roses. Business sessions will be held morning and afternoon, with an evening banquet and a big meeting later.

AMUSEMENTS

"Kit Carson's Wooing" is the title of the Selig film at the Palace tonight and is a picture story telling some of the life of the famous trapper and scout. "The Crowning Glory" is the Vitagraph and is a screaming comedy featuring Mr. Bunny, the large man who always creates such a roar of laughter to the audience. Next Monday and Tuesday Mr. Albert Earl will be at the Palace with his lecture and picture on Yellowstone Park and it will be remembered that Mr. Earl was the lecturer who was here several years ago with "Niagara" and which proved such a good attraction. "David Copperfield" a Thanhouser film in three reels will appear at this theater on Monday and Tuesday, December 5 and 6. Edwin Biddle proved a strong number on last night's program and was well received by the public. He will sing the illustrated song tonight.

A special program has been arranged for tonight at the Portola, when the merchants' benefit performance will be given. J. Walter Wilson will put on a character sketch from Riley's poem, "Fightin' Joe." His ability as a monologue artist is well known and this should prove a popular attraction. Besides the sketch three reels of pictures will also be on the program. "The Call of the Wilderness" is a thrilling western drama. "The Diving Girl" is a side splitting comedy. One other good picture will be shown. Friday and Saturday the head-on collision, which took place July Fourth at the State fair grounds will be the attraction.

The Princess will have the usual change of program tonight showing as the first film a Lubin drama, "Her Inspiration." Love and ambition contend in the heart of a beautiful mountain girl. CHAPTER XVIII.

When the ferry system began to man, and the time between Oakland and San Francisco was demonstrated to be cut in half, the tide of Daylight's terrific expenditure started to turn. Not that it really did turn, for he promptly went into further investments. Thousands of lots in his residence tracts were sold, and thousands of homes were being built. Factory sites also were selling, and business properties in the heart of Oakland. All this tended to a steady appreciation in the value of Daylight's huge holdings. But, as of old, he had his hunch and was riding it. Already he had begun borrowing from the banks. The magnificent profits he made on the land he sold were turned into more land, into more development; and instead of paying off old loans, he contracted new ones. As he had pyramidized in Dawson City, he now pyramidized in Oakland; but he did it with the knowledge that it was a stable enterprise rather than a risky placer-mining boom.

Work on Daylight's dock system went on apace; yet it was one of those enterprises that consumed money dreadfully and that could not be accomplished as quickly as a ferry system. Not content with manufacturing electricity for his street railways in the old-fashioned way, in power-houses, Daylight organized the Sierra and Salvador Power Company. This immediately assumed large proportions. Crossing the San Joaquin Valley on the way from the mountains, and plunging through the Contra Costa hills, there were many towns, and even a robust city, that could be supplied with power, also with light; and it became a street-and-house-lighting project as well. As soon as the purchase of power sites in the Sierras was rushed through, the survey parties were out and building operations begun. And so it went. There were a thousand maws into which he poured unceasing streams of money.

In the spring of the year the Great Panic came on. The first warning was when the banks began calling in their unprotected loans. Daylight promptly paid the first of several of his personal notes that were presented; then he divined that these demands but indicated the way the wind was going to blow, and that one of those terrific financial storms he had heard about was soon to sweep over the United States. How terrible this particular storm was to be he did not anticipate. Nevertheless, he took every precaution in his power and had no anxiety about his weathering it out.

And in the end, when early summer was on, everything began to mend. Came a day when Daylight did the unprecedented. He left the office an hour earlier than usual, and for the reason that for the first time since the panic there was not an item of work waiting to be done. He dropped into Hegan's private office, before leaving, for a chat, and as he stood up to go, he said:

"Hegan, we're all hunkadory. We're pulling out of the financial pawnshop in fine shape, and we'll get out without leaving one unredeemed pledge behind. The worst is over, and the end is in sight. Just tight rein for a couple more weeks, just a bit of a pinch or a flurri or so now and then, and we can let go and spit on our hands."

For once he varled his programme. Instead of going directly to his hotel, he started on a round of the bars and cafes, drinking a cocktail here and a cocktail there, and two or three when he encountered men he knew. It was after an hour or so of this that he dropped into the bar of the Parthenon for one last drink before going to dinner. By this time all his being was pleasantly warmed by the alcohol, and he was in the most genial and best of spirits. At the corner of the bar several young men were up to the old trick of resting their elbows and attempting to force each other's hands down. One broad-shouldered young giant never removed his elbow, but put down every hand that came against him. Daylight was interested. "It's Slosson," the barkeeper told him, in answer to his query. "He's the heavy-hammer thrower at the U.

We're Pulling Out of the Financial Pawnshop in Fine Shape."

C. Broke all records this year, and the world's record on top of it. He's a husky all right all right."

Daylight nodded and went over to him, placing his own arm in opposition.

"I'd like to go you a flutter, son, on that proposition," he said.

The young man laughed and locked hands with him; and to Daylight's astonishment it was his own hand that was forced down on the bar.

"Hold on," he muttered. "Just one more flutter. I reckon I wasn't just ready that time."

Again the hands locked. It happened quickly. The offensive attack of Daylight's muscles slipped instantly into defense, and, resisting vainly, his hand was forced over and down. Daylight was dazed. It had been no trick. The skill was equal, or, if anything, the superior skill had been his. Strength, sheer strength, had done it. He called for the drinks, and, still dazed and pondering, held up his own arm and looked at it as at some new strange thing. He did not know this arm. It certainly was not the arm he had carried around with him all the years. The old arm? Why, it would have been play to turn down that young husky's. But this arm—he continued to look at it with such dubious perplexity as to bring a roar of laughter from the young men.

This laughter aroused him. He joined in it at first, and then his face slowly grew grave. He leaned toward the hammer-thrower.

"Son," he said, "let me whisper a secret. Get out of here and quit drinking before you begin."

The young fellow flushed angrily, but Daylight held steadily on.

"You listen to your dad, and let him say a few. I'm a young man myself, only I ain't. Let me tell you, several years ago for me to turn your hand down would have been like committing assault and battery on a kindergarten."

Slosson looked his incredulity, while the others grinned—and clustered around Daylight encouragingly.

"Son, I ain't given to preaching. This is the first time I ever come to the penitent form, and you put me there yourself—hard. I've seen a few in my time, and I ain't fastidious so as you can notice it. But let me tell you right now that I'm worth the devil alone knows how many millions, and that I'd give it all, right here on the bar, to turn down your hand. Which means I'd give the whole shooting match just to be back where I was before I quite sleeping under the stars and come into the hen-coops of cities to drink cocktails and lift up my feet and ride. Son, that's what's the matter with me, and that's the way I feel about it. The game ain't worth the candle. You just take care of yourself, and roll my advice over once in a while. Good night."

He turned and lurched out of the place, the moral effect of his utterance largely spoiled by the fact that he was so promptly full while he uttered it.

Still in a daze, Daylight made to his hotel, accomplished his dinner, and prepared for bed.

"The damned young whippersnapper!" he muttered. "Put my hand down easy as you please. My hand!"

He held up the offending member and regarded it with stupid wonder. The hand that had never been beaten! The hand that had made the Circle City giants wince! And a kid from college, with a laugh on his face, had put it down—twice! Dede was right. He was not the same man. The situation would bear more serious looking into than he had ever given it. But this was not the time. In the morning, after a good sleep, he would give it consideration.

CHAPTER XIX.

Daylight awoke with the familiar parched mouth and lips and throat, took a long drink of water from the pitcher beside his bed, and gathered up the train of thought where he had left it the night before. He reviewed the easement of the financial strain. Things were mending at last. While the going was still rough, the greatest dangers were already past.

His mind moved on to the incident at the corner of the bar of the Parthenon, when the young athlete had turned his hand down. He was no longer stunned by the event, but he was shocked and grieved, as only a strong man can be, at this passing of his strength. He had always looked upon this strength of his as permanent, and here, for years, it had been steadily oozing from him. As he had diagnosed it, he had come in from under the stars to roost in the coops of cities. He had almost forgotten how to walk. He had lifted up his feet and been ridden around in automobiles, cars and carriages, and electric cars. He had not exercised, and he had dry-rotted his muscles with alcohol. And was it worth it? What did all his money mean after all? Dede was right. It could buy him no more than one bed at a time, and at the same time it had made him the abjectest of slaves. It tied him fast. Which was better? he asked himself. All this was Dede's own thought. It was what she had meant when she prayed he would go broke. He held up his offending right arm. It wasn't the same old arm. Of course she could not love that arm and that body as she had loved the strong, clean arm and body of years before. He didn't like that arm and body himself. A young whippersnapper had been able to take liberties with it. It had gone back on him. He sat up suddenly. No, he had gone back on it! He had gone back on himself. He had gone back on Dede. She was right, a thousand times right, and she had sense enough to refuse to marry a money-slave with a whiskey-rotted carcass.

He got out of bed and looked at himself in the long mirror on the wardrobe door. He wasn't pretty. The old-time lean cheeks were gone. These were heavy, seeming to hang down by their own weight. He looked for the lines of cruelty Dede had spoken of, and he found them, and he found the harshness in the eyes as well, the eyes that were muddy now after all the cocktails of the night before, and of the months and years before. He looked at the clearly defined pouches that showed under his eyes, and they shocked him. He rolled up the sleeve of his pajamas. No wonder the hammer-thrower had put his hand down. Those weren't muscles. A rising tide of fat had submerged them. He stripped off the pajama coat. Again he was shocked, this time by the bulk of his body. It wasn't pretty. The lean stomach had become a paunch. The rigid muscles of chest and shoulders and abdomen had broken down into rolls of flesh. And this was age. Then there drifted across the field of vision of his mind's eye the old man he had encountered at Glen Ellen, coming up the hillside through the fires of sunset, white-headed and white-bearded, eighty-four, in his hand the pall of foaming milk, and in his face all the warm glow and content of the passing summer day. That had been age. "Yes siree, eighty-four, and spryer than most," he could hear the old man say.

Next he remembered Ferguson, the little man who had scuttled into the road like a rabbit, the one-time managing editor of a great newspaper, who was content to live in the chaperon along with his spring of mountain water and his hand-reared and manicured fruit trees. Ferguson had solved a problem. A weakling and an alco-

But Parisian Sage Overcame Miss Kruger's Hair Troubles.

PARISIAN SAGE is not guaranteed to grow hair on bald heads but it is guaranteed by the well known druggists F. B. Johnson & Co. to stop falling hair, eradicate dandruff and stop itching scalp, or money back. Sold in every town in America by leading druggists for 50 cents a bottle. Read Miss Kruger's letter.

"PARISIAN SAGE is the best hair grower and beautifier and dandruff cure. I lost all my hair through typhoid fever; I was almost bald-headed and my scalp was as sore as could be. I tried everything, but in vain. Finally I tried PARISIAN SAGE, and after using one bottle my hair started to grow, and has grown three or four inches inside of two months. I advise every woman who wants beautiful hair to use PARISIAN SAGE." Miss Meta M. Kruger, Brownstown, Minn.

olic, he had run away from the doctors and the chicken-coop of a city, and soaked up health like a thirsty sponge. He sat down suddenly on the bed, startled by the greatness of the idea that had come to him. He did not sit long. His mind, working in its customary way, like a steel trap, canvassed the idea in all its bearings. It was big—bigger than anything he had faced before. And he faced it squarely, picked it up in his two hands and turned it over and around and looked at it. The simplicity of it delighted him. He chuckled over it, reached his decision, and began to dress. Midway in the dressing he stopped in order to use the telephone.

Dede was the first he called up.

"Don't come to the office this morning," he said. "I'm coming out to see you for a moment."

He called up others. He ordered his motor-car. To Jones he gave instructions for the forwarding of Bob and Wolf to Glen Ellen. Hegan he surprised by asking him to look up the deed of the Glen Ellen ranch and make out a new one in Dede Mason's name. "Who?" Hegan demanded. "Dede Mason." Daylight replied imperturbably—"the phone must be indistinct this morning. D-e-d-e M-a-s-o-n. Got it?"

Half an hour later he was flying out to Berkeley. And for the first time the big red car halted directly before the house. Dede offered to receive him in the parlor, but he shook his head and nodded toward her rooms.

"In there," he said. "No other place would suit."

As the door closed, his arms went out and around her. Then he stood with his hands on her shoulders and looking down into her face.

"Dede, if I tell you, flat and straight, that I'm going up to live on that ranch at Glen Ellen, that I ain't taking a cent with me, that I'm going to scratch for every bite I eat, and that I ain't going to play ary a card at the business game again, will you come along with me?"

She gave a glad little cry, and he nestled her in closely. But the next moment she had thrust herself out from him to the old position at arm's length.

"How is this possible? How can you leave your business? Has anything happened?"

"No, nothing's happened yet, but it's going to, blame quick. I've taken your preaching to heart, and I've come to the penitent form. I've taken my last drink. You're marrying a whisky-soak, but your husband won't be that. He's going to grow into another man so quick you won't know him. A couple of months from now, up there in Glen Ellen, you'll wake up some morning and find you've got a perfect stranger in the house with you, and you'll have to get introduced to him all over again. You'll say, 'I'm Mrs. Harnish, who are you?' And I'll say, 'I'm Elam Harnish's younger brother. I've just arrived from Alaska to attend the funeral.' 'What funeral?' you'll say. And I'll say, 'Why the funeral of that good-for-nothing, gambling, whisky-drinking Burning Daylight—the man that died of fatty degeneration of the heart from sitting in night and day at the business game.' 'Yes, ma'am,' I'll say, 'he's sure a gone coon, but I've come to take his place and make you happy. And now, ma'am, if you'll allow me, I'll just meander down to the pasture and milk the cow while you're getting breakfast.'

"But you haven't answered my questions," she reproached him, as she emerged, rosy and radiant, from the embrace that had accompanied the culmination of his narrative.

"Now just what do you want to know?" he asked.

A MAIL CARRIER'S LOAD

Seems heavier when he has weak back and kidney trouble. Fred Duehren, Mail Carrier at Atchison, Kas., says: "I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and had a severe pain across my back. Whenever I carried a heavy load of mail, my kidney trouble increased.

Some time ago, I started taking Folley Kidney Pills and since taking them I have gotten entirely rid of all my kidney trouble and am as sound now as ever." F. B. Johnson.

'Time's Flight Turned Backward' SAGE AND SULPHUR Made Her Look Twenty Years Younger

READ MRS. HERRICK'S SWORN STATEMENT

STATE OF NEW YORK } ss
COUNTY OF MONROE }

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a girl, I had a head of heavy, long, dark brown hair which was the envy of my schoolmates, and which attracted the attention and remarks of strangers. As I grew older, my hair commenced to come out, just a little at first, but gradually more and more, and then began to turn gray. I was induced by the many good reports I had heard of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy to try a bottle. My hair was quite thin and gray when I began using Sage and Sulphur, and you can imagine my satisfaction when I found that it was fast coming back to its natural condition, being thicker, darker and more glossy than it had been for a long time. I continued to use Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is now as heavy, dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. It is now four years since I commenced using Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is still in splendid condition.

Sworn to before me this 26th day of July, 1912.

A—The reason why spraying often fails in controlling the scale. 2 and 3 only coated in spots. Spray as in No. 1 and kill all of the insects.

B—A convenient arrangement for making home boiled lime sulphur. Sifted in the sulphur after lime has slaked.

The San Jose scale is now found in every county of Indiana. This pest was imported from China and thus has no natural enemies in this country. Wherever man does not combat it the scale multiplies unchecked until the trees on which it is found die. Most of our old home orchards have passed out of existence by way of the scale route. This loss of good, healthy bearing trees is a preventable one and some of the very effective remedies should be applied in the earlier stages of the scale infestation.

The best remedy for the San Jose scale that has yet been found is lime-sulphur wash. This material can either be bought in the form of a commercial mixture or made up at home. When bought it should be one of the high-grade articles and should test better than 32 degrees Baume. The home-made material can be made by cooking together 38 pounds of good, freshly burned lime and 80 pounds of high-grade flowers of sulphur in 50 gallons of water for one hour. This home-made solution should test about 26-28 degrees Baume. Both the commercial mixture and the home-made solution are concentrated and should be diluted before being applied to the trees.

Contrary to popular belief, the San Jose scale is not the hardest pest to control which infests the orchard. Proper material applied at the proper time and in the proper way will kill 90 per cent of the insects. Either purchase a good brand of commercial lime sulphur or carefully make your own and then apply it conscientiously and you will be able to save your home orchards from destruction by the San Jose scale.

As the San Jose scale is an armored insect protected by a waxy covering, a very caustic material must be

Feeding Corn Silage to Fattening Lambs

By F. G. KING, Animal Husbandry Department, Purdue Experiment Station
Purdue University Agricultural Extension

Silage Fed Lambs. Purdue Experiment Station, 1910.

The remarkable efficiency of the silo for increasing the feeding value of the plant has been clearly demonstrated with cattle, but has often been looked upon by sheepmen with suspicion. That such suspicions are not well founded is shown by the following trial conducted at this station in 1910-11. By the addition of corn silage to a ration of shelled corn and clover hay fed to western lambs, the rate of gain was increased five per cent, and the cost of gain decreased ten per cent. Moreover, the selling value of the lambs was increased ten cents per 100 pounds by the addition of the silage to the ration.

Another great cause of injury to lambs from silage is extreme acidity of the silage. When the corn is put into the silo before it has become fairly well matured, undue quantities of acid are formed. Silage containing these large amounts of acid cause derangement of the digestive tracts of the lambs with the final result of a loss of some animals. The corn when put into the silo should have the grains dented one-third and one-half the blades brown. In fact, the corn should be almost ready to put into the shock before it is ripe enough for good silage for fattening animals.

With these precautions, silage is a very safe feed for fattening lambs. One to two pounds of corn silage in a ration containing clover hay and corn stimulates the digestion and keeps the lambs in great vigor and robust health and finally returns a handsome profit over a similar flock not receiving the silage.

In feeding corn silage to lambs, several facts must be borne in mind. Principally among these, it should be remembered that moldy silage is practically always fatal to sheep. A large per cent of the fatalities among sheep receiving silage occur in the spring when the weather is getting warm and the tendency for silage to mold is great. Also there is sometimes loss

A POPULAR ELECTION OF THE POSTMASTER

How Kansas Congressman Solved Difficult Problem.

Leroy, Kan., Nov. 23.—By an overwhelming majority Miss Esther E. Abbott was elected postmaster of Leroy. She was given 554 votes to 71 for her opponent, O. C. Kersey. Men and women of all parties, patrons of the office, were permitted to vote, and Fred S. Jackson, representative from the Fourth district, who devised the plan for allowing the people to name their own postmaster, supervised the election. It is said that the election was the first of its kind ever held, although postmaster primaries often have been suggested.

Miss Abbott has been assistant postmaster nearly eight years under her father, and since his death a few months ago has been acting postmaster. When the matter of appointing a new postmaster came up so many persons applied for the place that Mr. Jackson decided on a primary. Miss Abbott immediately announced that she would be a candidate.

NEARING AN END

"Tar Party" Case Will Be Given to Jury Before Night.

Lincoln Center, Kan., Nov. 23.—Wendell W. McClellan, county attorney, began his address to the jury in the "tar party" trial here early last evening. He was followed by Colonel David Ritchie and Z. C. Milliken for the defense, after which court adjourned until 9:30 o'clock this morning. Today's session is being consumed by arguments by J. J. McCurdy for the defense, and A. M. Hawkes, representing the state. The case will reach the jury before night.

Use TIZ— Smaller Feet

Sore Feet, Tender Feet and Swollen Feet Cured Every Time TIZ Makes Sore Feet Well No Matter What Ails Them.

Everyone who is troubled with sore, sweaty, tender feet—swollen feet—smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions can quickly make their feet well now. Here is instant relief and a lasting permanent remedy—it's called TIZ. TIZ makes sore feet well and swollen feet are quickly reduced to normal size. Thousands of ladies have been able to wear shoes a full size smaller with perfect comfort.

It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous excretions which cause sore feet. Fenders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleanses them out and keeps them clean. It works right off. You will feel better the very first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all drugstores 25 cents per box or direct if you wish from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

EIGHT OFFICERS CONCERNED

Records in the Cases Disclosed by the State Board of Accounts Have Been Turned Over to Governor Marshall and by Him Given to the Attorney General For Transmission to the Prosecutors in Counties Named.

Indianapolis, Nov. 23.—Eight county, city and township officials who have failed to make good shortages discovered by field examiners for the state board of accounts will be sued in the courts for the amounts named. The records in their cases have been turned over to Governor Marshall by the board of accounts and by him given to the attorney general for transmission to prosecuting attorneys.

Direct charges amounting to $27,842.87 and constructive charges of $3,280.30 are involved in the eight cases. They will be the first prosecutions started under the amendment to the accounting board law which gives officials an opportunity to explain or make good their shortages before being sued.

DEATH KNELL TO ALL DAY SUCKER

D. J. N. Hurty, State Health Commissioner Seals Doom of School Children's Candy.

ATTACKS CHEWING GUM ALSO

"Neighborhood" Pencil And Chicle Are Condemned in New Hygienic Rules Being Prepared.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, state health commissioner, has set out on the trail of the "all-day sucker" the chewing gum and the "community" pencil of the Indiana schoolroom and he asserts he will not stop until he has put an end to their use.

The first stroke of the State Board of Health's hygiene blue pencil probably will be directed at the first-named solace of hungry pupils. The "all-day sucker" must go. It breeds germs; it dissipates digestive power and is altogether too "gooey" to be on the premises of a modern school. Cheap candies of all kinds will be put under the same ban by the health authorities.

The campaign on the aerie of childlike pleasure is to be accomplished primarily through the publication and distribution of the new set of health rules being prepared for school authorities and city, county and state health officers. The "sucker" might sepe the vengeance of the Health Board if it were not for the fact that it often becomes a communal joy and then, of course, disease germs are bound to be spread.

Gum chewing gives the small girl who becomes an habitual user of the chicle unbeautiful facial lines, which remain to battle dimples and other beauty spots in the young woman's physiognomy when she reaches the age when her charms are needed most. That is Dr. Hurty's excuse for publishing his edict against gum, he declares.

There is another reason, too, and that is the ceaseless action of the gum chewer on his or her salivary glands decreases the amount of ptyalin, needed so abundantly to augment digestion and thus inauguates and fosters the dread dyspepsia or after life.

"We shall advocate that parents of growing children prepare a little luncheon for them to carry to school with them," Dr. Hurty said yesterday. "Two or three crackers or a small apple or two pieces of bread, covered with jam, will do—anything to be rid of the insanitary, 'all-day sucker' or other cheap candy and the awful chewing gum."

"It's all right for growing kids to eat between meals, if they eat good things. They always are wolf-hungry at recess, and they really need a little sustenance. But not the sort which grows on sticks and is all colors of the rainbow, and is messy when sucked by several small mouths in succession."

In Chicago and at Providence, R. I., and several other cities the daily luncheon for the smaller children is paid for out of the general school fund, Dr. Hurty declares. He does not recommend that yet in Indiana, but he does elaborate on the advantages of a little lunch and death of cheap sweetmeats.

DEATH KNELL—Galley TWO

"Those cheaper penny candies, eaten all the time, as they are by hordes of Indiana school children, are life shorteners," the health commissioner said. "Their action on the alimentary tract is almost unbelievable in its dire results."

The "community" pencils are other school appurtenances to which the State board will take exceptions in its booklet, which is to be aimed as a safeguard to the life of Hoosier pupils in the lower grades. Dr. W. F. King, assistant secretary of the board, has drawn up a tentative ruling on that subject, prohibiting any interchange of pencils in a schoolroom. It has met opposition already, he said, because it was argued that such a system would be entirely too costly, both on the school officials and the parents.

So it is probable that the recommendations of the board to school teachers throughout the State will provide for a tall, narrow box, with pencil racks. Beneath this arrangement—in its cellar, so to speak—will be sprinkled a solution of formaldehyde and the vapor from that, ascending into the array of pencils in the box, unintermittently will insure the children forever against infection by the pencil route.

In one of the new health rules dry sweeping and dusting are condemned and prohibited. Before sweeping, light sprinkling of the floor with water or the use of dampened or oiled sawdust is recommended. Feather dusters, it is said, merely cause the dust to float in the air to be breathed by the pupils or to settle down to be dislodged again by subsequent dusting. In dusting an oiled cloth must be used. Dusting or sweeping either in corridors, stairways or classrooms, is prohibited at any time while the school is in session.

Dr. King is spending much time preparing the new draft of the rules which school authorities are to receive soon. He said if trustees, teachers, county superintendents and other officials could be taught to use proper care in preparing their school rooms in sanitary fashion for each day's work, the healthful effect upon the brains and bodies of the children would be noticeable immediately.
